CHURCH CELEBRATES 114th ANNIVERSARY.

Boston Presbyterian Church Sunday celebrated its 114th anniversary with Rev. Dr. Thomas Eakin, Principal of Knox College, as the guest preacher the services being conducted by the minister, Rev. H. L. Bennie of Acton. The edifice was crowded for the event with the fourth and fifth generations of the early worshippers occupying the pews where their forebears in by-gone years had listened to the Scriptural message.

At the foot of a riven tree in 1820 Rev. William Jenkins delivered the first sermon to a small congregation of Scots who were then battling the difficulties which beset them as they carved out material for their homes in their adopted land from a wild and thick forest. His text was: "They shall dwell in the wilderness." And, not many years after, the first edifice was erected on the very spot from which the first message was delivered.

Boston Church, so named in honor of Rev. Ettrick Boston, a noted Scottish divine, is equalled by few in Ontario for its dignified beauty. It is built of native limestone taken from the hills which face its doors. It replaces the original log structure, and is flanked by the cemetery, which was used as far back as 117 years ago.

Rev. Mr. Jenkins first visited the congregation while he was incumbent at Richmond Hill, making the strenuous journey through the forest trails on horseback. The distance separating Boston from his home parish was so great that he did not return for a year. On his second visit he preached and baptized, preparing the congregation for the reception of a resident minister. In 1822 Rev. Abner Wright took charge of the congregation instituting six elders and administering the Lord's Supper. Two years later the congregation was united with that of St. Paul's, Nelson, under the Rev. William King, and work was begun upon the first church of the district, a frame structure. Old memoirs and minutes recall that nine years were needed for the completion of the work all of which was done by members of the congregation. The frugality with which the pioneers had to live is demonstrated by an old bill, signed by John Sproat, one of the congregation, showing the cost of hardware, glass and whitening for the fitting and decorating of the frame church to have been 16 pounds 12 shillings 6 pence.

Rev. Peter Ferguson was the first minister of the district to take complete charge of the congregation. His ministry was ^a long one in spite of a split in the membership in 1844 over church union. A small body of the members desired to remain with the United Presbyterian Church, and the breach was closed only after Rev. Dr. Burns, Toronto, and Rev. Dr. William Rintoul, Streetsville had seriously urged the congregation to set aside their differences of opinion. Rev. James Harris composed the difficulty, and organized the congregation in the Presbyterian Church of Canada under the name of "Boston."

Several unions, notably with Norval and with Acton, were made, but, since the Church Union of 1925, the congregation has been linked with that of Omagh.

John Hilliard

A highly respected resident of King Township, in the person of John Hilliard, passed away suddenly on Saturday at the home of his son, Lawrence Hilliard, 9th line, King. Born in Vaughan Township 83 years ago the late Mr. Hilliard was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hilliard, pioneer York county settlers. Deceased was a most successful farmer and well known in North York. He attended the United Church, and in politics was a Conservative. Mr. Hilliard was twice married, his first wife being Margaret McClure, who died some years ago. From this union ten children survive. Fourteen years ago he married Helen Carlisle, who survives. Surviving sons and daughters are: Walter and Lawrence, of King, Samuel, of Mossbank, Sask., Charles, of Kitchener, Mrs. Walter Harris, Toronto, Mrs. James Stubbs, of the Peace River district, Alberta, Mrs. Ivan Cairns, of King, Mrs. Jas. Hilliard, of Alton, and Mrs. Samuel Metherington, of Shelburne. The funeral, which was largely attended, took place on Wednesday. Interment followed in King Cemetery.
---Bolton Enterprise.

In 1889 November a great flood swept through the village in which an elderly couple, Mr. and Mrs. Harria, parents of Samuel who is now living in Alton, were drowned. The flood was caused by the main support of McLellan's dam at the grist mill giving away and letting 20' of water down over 5 other dams (Ward's, Algie's, Alex Dick's, Jim Meek's, McKinnon's) All of these were swept away. Bridges and stone buildings such as Dick's Moulding shop were washed away. The stones on the skating rink today are reminders of the days when the stone moulding shop was shattered. Houses were filled with water and literally residents took to the heights. A few years ago Mr. Hall found moulding tools when digging a ditch for tile.

William Harris Quits Work Carried Mail For 20 Years

William Harris, who has carried the mail between the post office and the Canadian National Railway station for the last 20 years, made his last trip on Thursday evening. On Friday, the first day of April, the contract was taken over by David Barrett.

On Thursday evening, post office associates paid a visit to the home of Mr. Harris on Ellen street and presented him with a handsome living room lamp. It provides both direct and indirect lighting. The presentation was made by Col. C. M. Corkett, Brampton postmaster. Friends of Mr. Harris at the C.N.R. station presented him with a valuable and comfortable pair of slippers.

A son of Martin Harris, he was born in Garafraxa township 77 years ago. His early years were spent in farming. At the age of 19, he joined Burnett L.O.L., No. 5, when the hall was out at Orangeville on the Third line east. Thos. Graham was master at the time.

For some years he worked with James Jackson at Meadowvale. In the course of time, he became a partner of Mr. Jackson. Later he purchased the farm outright. In the early part of December, 28 years ago, he was taking a cow from Meadowvale to a butcher at Mount Charles. When coming to Palestine school, the animal took a run through the yard and then started back home. Mr. Harris tried to stop her, and, while doing so, was knocked down. His right arm was injured so seriously that strenuous work during the rest of his life seemed impossible.

Upon hearing this verdict, he sold out his farm and purchased a livery business in Brampton. He started about this time of year in 1910. This he continued for 11 years, at which time he disposed of his business to O. Rutledge.

During the first year of his livery venture, he only saw a couple of automobiles in the district. During succeeding years they became more numerous. Mr. Harris is of the opinion that horses have more intelligence than some people believe. Upon meeting one of the noisy contraptions of the early days, they reared up because they thought they were going to get a taste of the whip. If the lines were allowed to hang a bit slack, they would pass without difficulty.

Others, he recalls, made a 'dive for the nearest laneway when seeing an automobile approaching. This, he says, only caused them to think there was some reason to be afraid.

For a long time, he provided travelling accommodation at all hours, day and night, for six doctors. Some of the trips were made during blinding snow storms and others when mud was axle deep. Drives to Georgetown, Milton, Streetsville, Caledon East, and Orangeville were not infrequent. He recalls when horses drawing buggies had to pause often for a breath when plodding through mud on the main street in Brampton.

Mr. Harris had a long period of illness a few years ago as the result of a heart attack. For some time past, he has been carrying mail in all kinds of weather. He served under three postmasters and only missed one train, that being due to a bad traffic jam on the main street 15 years ago.

His wife, formerly Miss Jennie Bartley, passed to her reward four years ago. He has two daughters and two sons, Mrs. Fred Ashton, Brampton; Miss Verral Harris, Toronto; Bartley Harris, in Orangeville; and Elgie Harris, now employed as a graduate druggist in Brampton.
